CERVERA TRYING TO ESCAPE.

Ready to Take Desperate Chances to Elude Sampson at Santiago.

Shafter's Army Will Not Land For Some Days. Crisis Approaching in British Foreign Politics.

TRYING TO ESCAPE.

Reported That Cervera's Fleet is Looking for an Escape.

New York, June 22.—A special dispatch from Santiago dated Monday, via Kingston, dated today, says that the Cubans inform Admiral Sampson that Cervera is prepared to make a desperate effort to take his ships out of Santiago harbor at the first opportunity. They have been coaled to their full capacity and every night drop down the bay. They intend to embrace the first opportunity to dash past the blockaders.

The New French Cabinet.

Paris, June 22.—President Faure has invited M. Paul Louis Payrat to form a cabinet that will be representative of the different Republican factions.

Aid for Spain.

Kingston, Jamaica, June 22.—The captain of the steamer Adula from Cienfuegos says that he learned there that the Spanish steamer Purisima Concepcion which sailed from Kingston June 16 with food for the Spanish troops and $100,000 in gold had arrived at Trinidad in the province of Santa Clara.

Bound for Manila.

San Francisco, June 22.—It is stated on good authority that General Merritt will sail for Manila next Wednesday on the steamer Newport, following the third fleet of transports which leaves Monday. Brigadier-General McArthur will command the next expedition.

Baby of the Cuban Navy.

New York, June 22.—The sloop Alfredo, the first vessel of the Cuban navy, sailed this morning in command of "Dynamite Johnny" O'Brien, of filibustering fame; and a crew of seven men. It is bound for some Cuban port.

General LINARES' Telegrams.

London, June 22.—The Havana correspondent of The Times says: "General Linares, in command in the province of Santiago, telegraphs that 60 vessels, supposed to be carrying the American expeditionary force, have arrived on Santiago."

CRISIS IN ENGLAND

Thought to be Approaching. Chamberlain May Resign.

London, June 22.—It is rumored that Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, will shortly resign from the ministry in order to assume the leadership of a large number of unionists in the house of commons who are discontented with the foreign policy of the government. There seems to be no doubt that Mr. Chamberlain is dissatisfied with his present position and affairs in the far East and in West Africa take the turn he expects, his friends believe he will not remain in the cabinet to share in the shipwreck of a policy he never approved.

Whatever may be the outcome, the disquieting idea is undoubtedly prevalent in conservative circles that Mr. Chamberlain contemplates some move and the extent to which this is credited shows how little Mr. Chamberlain can count upon Tory confidences.

FEVER AND CYCLONES.

Freedom of Marines and Vessels from Disease and Storm.

Washington, June 22.—The fact that the sailors on board Admiral Sampson's ships and marines on shore have thus far escaped even the slightest touch of yellow fever encourages the authorities here to believe that perhaps the dangers from that source have been greatly overestimated. Up to the present time the American forces have not only been extremely fortunate in escaping Spanish bullets, but also in experiencing freedom from the cyclones which are common in the Caribbean sea and the gulf of Mexico at this period of the year. It is realized, however, that this good fortune cannot be expected to continue, and steps are being taken to establish signal stations on the coast of South America to give warning of the approach of tornadoes and hurricanes.

Bound for Manila.

San Francisco, June 22.—It is stated on good authority that General Merritt will sail for Manila next Wednesday on the steamer Newport, following the third fleet of transports which leaves Monday. Brigadier-General McArthur will command the next expedition.

Baby of the Cuban Navy.

New York, June 22.—The sloop Alfredo, the first vessel of the Cuban navy, sailed this morning in command of "Dynamite Johnny" O'Brien, of filibustering fame; and a crew of seven men. It is bound for some Cuban port.

General LINARES' Telegrams.

London, June 22.—The Havana correspondent of The Times says: "General Linares, in command in the province of Santiago, telegraphs that 60 vessels, supposed to be carrying the American expeditionary force, have arrived on Santiago."

SENATOR BUTLER.

It has been practically decided that the prisoners will be placed on board the transports now at Santiago and brought to the United States. In this event the military prison will be established at Fort McPherson near Atlanta. The advantages possessed by this site are numerous, but the most important is the freedom from possible spread of the yellow fever. The transfer of the prisoners to this country will be necessary because of the difficulty of feeding so many thousand men on Cuban soil, and also because the war department does not wish to maintain a large army at Santiago, a detail which would be necessary should the prisoners be kept at that point.

Boston Opinion.

Boston, June 22.—"The Cubans," says The Journal, "are past masters in the difficult art of bush warfare, as brave as men can be, and fairly running over with delight at the coming of the long-looked-for 'American' and the prospect of an early end of their years of toil and sacrifice."

The Advertiser says that "the arrival of General Shafter's army off Santiago at noon yesterday may fairly be considered to have marked the termination of a very successful and satisfactory voyage."

The Globe vouches for the statement that "it is not true that the horses in the C. S. A. are past masters in the difficult art of bush warfare, as brave as men can be, and fairly running over with delight at the coming of the long-looked-for 'American' and the prospect of an early end of their years of toil and sacrifice."

Married This Morning—Twenty Dollars Gone—Hose Tower to Serve a Double Purpose—Chess Club Banquet—A Good Beginning—Pleased With the Country.

Married This Morning.

François Dufraine and Miss Clara Hebert were married this morning at 8 o'clock in the French church. The ceremony was performed by a priest from North Adams. Rev. F. Baudouin being out of town. A good number of relatives and friends were present. After the marriage a brief reception was held at the home of the bride's father, David Hebert, and the couple left on the 9:40 train for Boston, where they will spend about a week. They will make their home in this town, where both are well known and have many friends who extend hearty congratulations. Mr. Dufraine is an employee of the Fitchburg railroad.

A Good Beginning.

As stated in Tuesday's Transcript, F. H. Daniels has been commissioned by the governor to enlist 25 men to serve in a Massachusetts regiment. Mr. Daniels began his work Monday noon and by Tuesday night he had the following seven names on his list: Thomas McMahon, John Walden, Herbert Seeley, John Ferris, S. P. King, Joseph Davis and Harmon Findley. Two of these are from North Adams and some from Blackinton. Mr. Daniels thinks he will have no trouble in getting the 25, notwithstanding the fact that eight or 10 Williamstown men have just enlisted at Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

To Serve a Double Purpose.

The hose tower which is being erected for Gale Hose company will serve a double purpose. It will furnish accommodations for washing the carts and drying the hose, and a floor laid on a level with the door leading to the opera house stage will furnish storage for the trunks of theatricals companies, thus leaving more room on the stage behind the scenes. Enough of the space in the tower will be left unfoored to make room for hanging up the hose.

Pleased With the Country.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Howes of Boston arrived at the Sand Springs, Monday. They made the journey by team and were greatly charmed by the scenery of the Deerfield valley and the view from Hoosac mountain, which they crossed Monday morning, one of the clearest and pleasantest days of the summer. They had heard and read much about the beauty of the region, but found it far beyond their expectations and declare that language cannot do it justice.

Chess Club Banquet.

The Crescent Chess club held a banquet Monday evening in its rooms in B. F. Bridges' house and it was a pleasant affair. Ten of the 12 members were present and a good spread was enjoyed. Edwin Bridges acted as toasting master and those who responded were Terry Quinn, Wallace Sherman, Walter Wells, Archie Brown and Henry Noel. The club is talking of holding a tournament in the near future.

Twenty Dollars Gone.

Mrs. Peter Dolan went to A. E. Hall's store Tuesday morning and when she opened her pocketbook to pay for what she brought she was painfully surprised to find that $20 which should have been there was gone. She could not account for the disappearance of the money and suspected that some one had entered her home and taken it from the pocketbook.

Robert Colt, who works for F. H. Daniels, is suffering from an attack of "pinkeye" and is under the care of Dr. Hull.

Frank Lord, manager of the college farm, went to Northampton Monday accompanied by Dr. Hill and traded four horses for four with Gilford & Wood, the well known dealers. The horses were exchanged today.

The classes of '93 and '95 held reunions and banquets Tuesday night, the former at the Idlewild and the latter at the Greylock. Frank Mills, formerly of South Williamstown, was a member of '93 and was present at the reunion.

A good sprinkling of North Adams people attended the class day exercises Tuesday and the commencement exercises today.

Mrs. E. D. Church of North Adams was the guest Tuesday of her sister, Mrs. L. A. Hunt.

AN OPERATION AVOIDED.

Mrs. Rosa Gaum Writes to Mrs. Pinkham About It. She Says:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I take pleasure in writing you a few lines to inform you of the good your Vegetable Compound has done me. I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me; it has, indeed, helped me wonderfully.

For years I was troubled with an ovarian tumor, each year growing worse, until at last I was compelled to consult with a physician.

He said nothing could be done for me but to go under an operation.

In speaking with a friend of mine about it, she recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, saying she knew it would cure me. I then sent for your medicine, and after taking three bottles of it, the tumor disappeared. Oh! you do not know how much good your medicine has done me. I shall recommend it to all suffering women.—Mrs. ROSA GAUM, 720 Wall St., Los Angeles, Cal.

The great and unvarying success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in relieving every derangement of the female organs, demonstrates it to be the modern safeguard of woman's happiness and bodily strength. More than a million women have been benefited by it.

Every woman who needs advice about her health is invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass.

A child of Aurora, Mo., had eczema on its face, head, and body, causing intense pain.

Comfort Powder

relieved it immediately. It is wonderfully soothing and healing to the skin. Dr. Chapin attended, and says the powder is a great success. 25 and 50 cents.

TAILOR MADE GOWNS.

Blouses, Boleros Without Sleeves and Chemisettes of Various Styles.

Tailor made gowns are in great demand, and are particularly favored by women who have a graceful figure. Some of these gowns have the regulation close bodices, others such liked for warm weather, consisting of a skirt and bolero, the latter terminating at the waist line and worn over a chemisette of foulard, glace taffeta or batiste.

Sometimes the bolero is sleeveless, leaving the shirt waist sleeves uncovered—a cool fashion, but rather negligé in effect, suggestive of a man in his shirt sleeves.

Chemisettes and even wash shirt waists are rather more elaborate in style this season, the latter being frequently tucked, embroidered and decorated with bands of insertion or stripes of goods stitched on.

Of course the silk waists afford a much wider scope for fancy, and are lavishly decorated with lace, plannings and ruchings. A man's neck scarf may be worn or a soft

Of course the silk waists afford a much wider scope for fancy, and are lavishly decorated with lace, plannings and ruchings. A man's neck scarf may be worn or a soft tailor made gown is in great demand, and are particularly favored by women who have a graceful figure. Some of these gowns have the regulation close bodices, others such liked for warm weather, consisting of a skirt and bolero, the latter terminating at the waist line and worn over a chemisette of foulard, glace taffeta or batiste.

Sometimes the bolero is sleeveless, leaving the shirt waist sleeves uncovered—a cool fashion, but rather negligé in effect, suggestive of a man in his shirt sleeves.

Chemisettes and even wash shirt waists are rather more elaborate in style this season, the latter being frequently tucked, embroidered and decorated with bands of insertion or stripes of goods stitched on.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL GRADUATION.

Interesting and Patriotic Exercises.

Good Results of Giving Diplomas.

The opera house was well filled with people Tuesday evening and the grammar school graduation passed off very smoothly. The program was well arranged and the exercises proved of especial interest inasmuch as the essays and recitations were all more or less patriotic in nature. The graduates wrote interestingly of the present war, and those who took part in the evening's program received generous applause.

Rev. O. I. Darling offered prayer, and after the presentation of diplomas, F. R. Shaw of the school committee and Supt. J. C. Gray made some interesting remarks concerning the schools. The idea of graduating pupils from the grammar to the high school was first introduced by Supt. Gray and it has proved an excellent thing.

Heretofore pupils would stay in school just long enough to become of the age when allowed to go to work and they would leave and enter the mill. Now however the fact that a diploma is given to graduates of the grammar school, serves as an attraction and they try to complete the grammar school course.

The decorations of the stage Tuesday evening were very fine and credit is due to Florist Koch who did most of the work. The graduates are as follows:

Liberty street school, Arthur H. Ainslie, Bertram L. Ballou, George E. Beers, Daniel T. Collins, Ethel M. Cadigan, Margaret M. Curran, Mary E. Cahill, John C. Dudley, Arthur J. Fox, Edna Fessenden, John H. Gray, Charles A. Gould, Jr., Mildred L. Gould, Arthur J. Hoffinan, Mary C. Hoelzel, Agnes M. Haggerty, Harriet Hawkins, Anna B. Haff, Inez B. Ingraham, Jessie M. Jones, William H. Kelly, Mary S. LeVeille, Mary A. Meison, Carl E. Richmond, Frances E. Russell, Henry D. Shaw, Rollo L. Sandford, Mary Street, Isabelle Thompson, Blanche VanDyke, Charles P. Welch, Ada M. Waldron, Robert V. L. Zahner.

Renfrew school, Harry Beeler, Harriet E. Bryant, George H. Degenkolb, Margaret D. Dollar, Hugh J. Downey, Sarah M. Durkin, Margaret E. Ferguson, Eva B. Foster, Mattie M. Gaedette, Laura M. Gisnet, John T. Kerigan, Ella G. McGrath, Franklin McLaren, Delia N. Morton, Agnes W. Sanderson, Andrew G. Scott, Francis E. Sims, Thomas E. Sullivan, Eliza M. Stetson, Eugenie N. Veronneau, George H. Wright.

Presented With A Diamond.

A newspaper has been received here from Notre Dame, Indiana, and gives an account of the last game of the Notre Dame college baseball team against a professional team of that place. In part it says: "Notre Dame ended her baseball season in a blaze of glory yesterday afternoon by defeating the South Bend Greens 5 to 4. Michael Powers, the greatest college catcher in the country, stood behind the plate with his recently acquired Louisville uniform and the varsity looked upon their captain with pride, feeling that it was an honor to have him chosen to play with the cream of the base ball world."

"In the seventh inning Powers stepped to the plate amid the cheers of the crowd. At a given signal the captain of the South Bend team pulled from somewhere a beautiful silk umbrella neatly decorated in the red and green of the South Bend team and the gold and blue of the varsity, which he presented to the surprised captain of Notre Dame. Hardly had Mr. Powers taken the umbrella when the manager of the varsity team in a pretty presentation speech presented Mr. Powers with a valuable diamond stud. The game then proceeded." During the game Powers had three hits and six put outs.

Public Exhibit of Drawings.

The public has availed itself generously of the opportunity to see the work of the past year in drawing by the pupils of the different schools. Between 600 and 700 examples of work were hung upon the walls of the preparatory room of the high school. These were carefully arranged in sections according to the grades, ranging from the high school down to the primary department. It was surprising to see the variety and strength in the work over the former drawing book system. At present instead of making copies from other people's work the pupil is obliged to work wholly from the object, thus obtaining freedom and individuality. This was clearly shown in the work of designing. More than usual interest was displayed by all from the fact that a new supervisor took charge of the work so well started by Mr. Campbell. From the general sentiment expressed by all who saw this year's work, Mr. Dilworth may well feel repaid for his efforts. He has not only kept up the former standard but the work shows marked advance in all the branches.

No More Hand Concerts.

Germania band had promised to give an open air concert on the bandstand this evening, but since last Thursday they have changed their minds. The chief reason for it appears to be that the organization has not received the recognition by a certain local organization, the Alert hose company. When the Alerts went to Westfield to the firemen's muster last week, they hired the Forest Park drum corps instead of Germania band, and the leader mentioned this fact to a member of the Alerts, as the reason for the band's action. The action of the band does not seem justifiable to the public, and if this is the only reason, the band will make a better impression if they continue the concert.

Money Lost in Dentists' Chair.

THE WARDROBE.

Trimmings and Accessories of Pretty Summer Gowns.

Bolts of dull finished kid, plain, embroidered or spangled, are the mode of the moment, and grosgrain and satin ribbons, with or without slides, are also worn. A few corslets are seen, but these are not the dominant idea. They are mostly employed in connection with the long sash ends so much liked with soft summer gowns.

It has been already mentioned that stitching and stitched straps are the chief decorations of tailor made gowns, but the straps are often of satin instead of being of the same goods as the costume. Satin gowns are $10 bill which she had was gone. Mrs. Barlow and the dentist were the only persons beside Miss Wheeler in the room and Miss Wheeler believed it was Mrs. Barlow who took it. The case was continued until this morning.

Result of a Cock Fight.

Warren Derosia of Renfrew was in court Tuesday morning charged with assault and battery on William Stumpitz. The latter is quite an old man. Like a recent case in the local court the row started over a rooster fight Monday afternoon. Mr. Stumpitz wanted to stop the fight and threw a stone at the birds. Mr. Derosia was displeased with his neighbor's action and slapped him and later hit him with a brick. Mr. Derosia was fined $5.00.

IN THE NICK OF TIME.

Mrs. Lucia, 34 Lincoln street, North Adams, Mass., received a severe fit of sciatica two years ago resulting in a severe injury to her spine. Recovery from her spinal trouble was slow and in the opinion of some of the best physicians of North Adams, owing to the pronounced systemic disturbances, very doubtful.

For the past eight months, she has suffered intensely from stomach, kidney and intestinal disturbances. She relates her experiences as follows: "I suffered terribly from my fall of two years ago, and for the past eight months I have been unable to retain scarcely any food on my stomach. As soon as food was taken, it soured on my stomach and was immediately expelled. I suffered from the most severe headaches, my kidneys were out of order, secreting a heavy highly colored urine of a very irritating nature. My liver and intestines were inactive and abdominal bloating was a too frequent and I assure you a most disagreeable occurrence. I have consulted three of the best physicians at North Adams and found no relief. I thought that I was doomed to suffer to the end. My strength was all wasted and I was confined to my bed.

"I was advised by a friend to try Curo Blood Tonic and did so. I cannot express my gratitude for the wonderful relief I have experienced during the past few weeks. My appetite has returned and my digestion is good. My liver and kidneys are working well, and the intestinal disturbances have disappeared. I no longer suffer from the terrible headaches. I am gaining weight rapidly, and am now able to be about the house and I hope to soon enjoy an afternoon's walk. I most cheerfully recommend Curo Blood Tonic. I believe that any one acquainted with my condition during the past two years cannot doubt the virtues of Curo Tonic."

straps are less severe than those of cloth and give an aspect of greater elaboration. They are also well used on jackets and capes of light cloth in conjunction with applications of lace or embroidery, a system of trimming which may be simple or rich, according as the satin is of the same shade as the cloth and the applications unobtrusive, or the satin is of a contrasting shade and accompanied by much guipure laid over satin.

Tailor made capes are rather long this season, and are usually finished by one or more circular ruffles, so slightly curved that they are not very full.

The cut shows a girl's costume of gray wool, the skirt being decorated with bands of cream guipure. The blouse opens over a pointed guipure of geranium velvet and has revers of the velvet with guipure applications. The close sleeves have cuffs like the revers and a triple cap of gray goods. The belt and collar are of geranium velvet, the hat of tobacco brown straw trimmed with geranium and geranium velvet.

employed as a decorative fabric, is especially pretty as an adornment of bridal costumes, its transparent cloudiness softening the long lines of the gown and harmonizing it with the filmy veil. Draperies of mousseline may be arranged around the neck, bust and shoulders, the sleeves may be covered with puffings of it, and it may compose the entire tableau or be carried completely around the foot of the skirt in plattings or ruffles.

White satin, the conventional material for bride's attire, remains the favorite still, although moire and broche silks are sometimes employed. Cream white is chosen for brunettes and plump women, snow white for slender and fair women. Whatever white is selected all the accessories should be of the same tint—stockings, gloves, shoes and hats.

The cluster of orange blossoms is now worn at the heart instead of at the waist, and only a few of the flowers are used for decoration. The simple spray of blossoms or a little diadem is preferred for the head, and is placed toward the front.

The cut shows a costume for the bride's mother. It has a long redngote of green broche silk, bordered with a ruche of mitonette green. The skirt and plastron are of plaited light green silk, as are the epauletts and cravat. The broche sleeves are plain. The straw toque is trimmed with pink poppies and white feathers.

"WILLIAMS SPIRIT."

To no small part of the country does the annual college commencement mean so much as to Western Massachusetts. With its Williams, Amherst, Smith, South Hadley, agricultural college, and dozens of important schools and seminaries, every town almost has a personal interest in the graduations of some one of the country's important educational institutions. To this particular part of the region comes perhaps the most impressive one of the many commencements. There is something in Williams' spirit which makes the Berkshire college, though small, notable among all colleges.

Writing of this, the Boston Advertiser has comments that will interest every Berkshire citizen as well as every Williams man. It says: Most of the graduates from Williams college become professional men, lawyers, clergymen, doctors, etc. There is among these graduates a characteristic "Williams spirit." It is showing itself today in the work of men who have become famous in politics, in science, in religion, in the law. It is a spirit essentially of thoroughness of high ideals and of constant recognition of the demands of duty. There seems to be something in the air of the Berkshire Hills, some mysterious product of the iron and granite, that enters into the spirit of Williams men and shows itself in their lives. Whatever it may be, it is summed up in the phrase, "the Williams spirit."

It is a matter of importance to this commonwealth, and to other commonwealths east and west where Williams graduates go, that the "Williams spirit" is constantly at work and shows itself, perhaps in the weekly sermons of some enthusiastic young clergyman in an inland village, or perhaps in the missionary work of an American settlement in Turkey. This force, working year after year and decade after decade, eventually comes (with similar forces engendered in other American colleges) to produce something in the way of public sentiment which perhaps would today be impossible in any other nation of this world. By a study of these results only is it possible to realize what the life of a man like Mark Hopkins means to a whole nation.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

So far little active work seems to have been done towards any recognition of the fact in this city that July 4 is the Fourth of July. Instead of observing the anniversary in the highest form of patriotism possible for the present year as mentioned some time ago in these columns, there does not seem to be the intention of recognizing the day even in the old-fashioned way of a public celebration. There is apparently the firm intention of enjoying a day free from work, and nothing more. If a sum of money had been raised or set apart for purposes of celebration, the highest patriotism would be shown in expending a good proportion of it in connection with the war, as some other cities have done, but under present circumstances there is little prospect of any such feature of the day. The least that can be done is to respond to any efforts which may be made to send up a modest rocket in the name of the public, with such incidents as make a rocket a success, and to show that North Adams appreciates the fact that this is a year when pride in our country's history is as justifiable as ever before.

If the Cuban insurgents are not careful their Manila brethren will take the record away from them.

The Vesuvius has caused quite an eruption of surprise and admiration among army and navy men.

When the dynamite shells explode the Spaniards are reminded that there was once a Yankee war vessel called the Maine.

Our impatient volunteers who yearn for a trip to Porto Rico are hopeful that they, too, will soon be in transports.

The Populists undoubtedly opposed the bond measure because they did not want all the people to become bondholders.

The shooting abilities of the Cubans are not what you might call first-class, but if they will only keep their guns pointed toward the Spaniards all will be well.

This city is to be represented by a shocking array of alleged sinners at the next term of the superior court. Lively police, wicked city, or unlucky evil-doers?

Berkshire's volunteers are now supposed to be landed on Cuban soil, and every scrap of information about the "invasion of Cuba" may have a personal interest for local homes.

The boys at the front will not be shut off from communication with friends at home any longer than is necessary. Half a ton of letters and some six tons of second class mail matter will be sent from Tampa to the men of General Shafter's army as soon as mail communication can be opened.

The society of "friends," non-religious, must have gone fishing for a week, not to have given the city a new political candidate for several whole days. Or they may be having trouble in getting prospective candidates into their hands, where all successful candidates must be.

It may not have occurred to some of our bimetallic friends, but the ownership of bonds, payable in coin by small investors all over the country, is a pretty good guarantee of sound money in the future. The man who saves $20 to put in a government bond is going to do his best to see that the coin it is payable in is as good as the best.

A PRINCE'S CONSTANCY.

Cupid Falls to Discover It in His Utopian Agency.

In Utopia, at the crossroads of Dreams and Sentimental Memories, Cupid had started a lost and found agency.

Upon the shelves and in the cupboards of his establishment the little god had accumulated an odd collection of objects both precious and fragile. There were lost ambitions by the score, neatly labeled, but never to be claimed; shattered illusions collected in jars of appropriate sizes, childhood loves faded, but still fragrant; architectural plans of numberless castles in Spain—indeed, every description of tender and extravagant and exquisite things.

Tullio, the beautiful prince of the land appeared at the request window.

"My constancy," he demanded.

"Where and when did you lose it?" asked Cupid with a businesslike air.

Tullio scratched his head meditatively.

"Down on the road of Common Sense," said he.

Cupid scrutinized his interlocutor closely.

"Are you sure you have been there?" he asked.

"It was long ago," stated Tullio, "and that was why I lost my constancy."

Cupid set to searching dusty shelves for the required object. He found any number of dead loves, a dozen parcels of misplaced affections, some ominous intrigues, which he hurried over with sundry blushing, a single package of self-conceit, which is not often lost and found, or pride which had been dropped by a duchess who loved a blacksmith. But he did not find the prince's constancy.

"Not here," said Cupid peremptorily.

"You will have to try the bureau of impossible dreams."

Prince Tullio shrugged his shoulders with indifference.

"I shall do nothing of the sort," he said. "I shall let my constancy go to the devil, to whom it rightly belongs."

"There is no use in doing that," smiled Cupid. "He has all he wants already in his affection for Utopian princess. Some day you will find that out."—Brooklyn Citizen.

HER LATCHKEY EXPERIENCE.

Adventure That Befell Her the First Time She Made Use of It.

It was her first experience with a latchkey, and it wouldn't open the door, try as she would. Presently a man passing along the silent street hesitated, looked at her for a moment, and ascended the steps. If he had spoken to her, she would have screamed. As he didn't speak, she screamed anyway.

Two seconds later that obstinate door was flung violently open, and the entire family, in varying stages of negligence attire, precipitated themselves upon her and the front steps. Several masculine members of the family seized the intruder, who was actively engaged in making popular and wordless gestures, and dragged him into the glare of the hall lamp.

"What did he do to you?" "What's the matter?" "Call the police!" and sundry frantic exclamations rent the air of the hallway and were hurled at the head of the offender, and it was some time before the unintentional cause of all the disturbance was able to make his unconfounding voice heard at all.

"I board next door to you," he managed to whisper hoarsely at last, "and I saw the young lady couldn't open the door, so I was going to offer assistance when she screamed. And I've such a beastly sore throat that I couldn't speak loud enough to make you hear when you fell upon me."

Explanations were in order promptly and forthwith, and the episode ended peacefully, but it will be many a day before the heroine of it will venture out alone at night again, and the new boarder next door hasn't done a single thing toward extending the acquaintance begun so inauspiciously.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Different Case.

"What's the matter, old man?"

"Oh, an old uncle of mine is coming up from the country to visit me. He's one of the greenest old guys in seven states. I suppose he'll make me the laughing stock of everybody that knows me."

"It isn't your Uncle Harry, who was up here last year, is it?"

"You don't seem to be afraid that he'd make a laughing stock of you then."

"I know, but he's gone and lost all his money."—Chicago News.

ON A TORPEDO BOAT.

The Little Hornets of the Navy Are as Great a Menace to Those on Board as to Those Whom It Is Their Purpose to Destroy.

Cramped Quarters on the Insufferably Hot Death Dealing Cockle Shells of the Cuban Squadron Make Life Well Nigh Unbearable.

Copyright, 1895.

Our navy is full of heroes whose names are seldom heard and are certainly not familiar to any one outside of official circles. The newspapers are given up to the achievements of the Deweys, Schleys and Sampsons of the navy, but the commanders of the little "horns" or "spitfires" with the Cuban blockading squadron are rarely mentioned, and yet these men are charged with the most perilous work that can possibly fall to any one on board any sort of a warship. On their little cockle-shells existence is well nigh purgatory and yet, besides the discomforts they suffer under normal conditions, they are required to ascertain for the commanders of the large and stately vessels which do most of the fighting and incidentally get all of the glory just what the enemy is about. Scarcely a night passes that the torpedo boats of the blockading fleet are not sent upon dangerous reconnaissances into the very mouth of Havana harbor. With the big searchlights on the Morro sweeping the sea in every direction for the express purpose of spying out these little intruders and with hidden mines beneath them their mission is one which requires the very highest order of courage.

Sometimes indeed they are detected, and then there is a run for it. The Ericsson recently was seen by the lookout on Morro, and the powerful searchlight was turned full upon her as a preparatory step to a welcome of steel, but before the sleepy Spanish gunners could get to their posts the sleek little Ericsson, lying low in the water and bath, electric lights, speaking tubes, polished furniture and handsome carpets and mirrors, while engravings or pastels and paintings hang upon the walls. The last statement would be particularly applicable to the cabin of Captain Chadwick of the New York, he is considerably more than an amateur artist in both oil and water colors. His work has long since excited favorable comment from art authorities, and while the parlor of his New York city home is adorned with evidences of his talent there is no doubt that the sides of his room on board the armored cruiser have also tacked upon them sketches that he has made from nature in many waters and varied climates.

As the ship decreases in size its general accommodations necessarily become more limited, but on the small gunboat there is still much evidence of comfort and the homelike appearance that little accessories of drapery and bafe-a-brac may give anywhere to otherwise forbidding steel or stone walls. But with the torpedo boat the idea of actual living for human beings seems to have been entirely disregarded if not forgotten. The primary inception appears to have been to build a floating machine with a possible corner here and there for a man. Every one knows that the torpedo boat is built merely as a destructive agent, but it is not such common information that every apparent purpose of being arranged to carry living people has been omitted. The commanding officer's room is incredibly small. His associates, two or three in number, must be satisfied with

When on station, away from foes, they use the boats in landing on shore where some of them may camp for the night. Fortunately for the health and reason of them all, torpedo boats require frequent repairs, and then they return to Tampa or Key West, giving the men a welcome vacation for a few days at least from the confines of the metal calendar.

The brave fellows on board our large battleships and cruisers, even with their special awnings of duck swaying over the main or upper deck, their large quarters of open space, ventilating apparatus, air funnels and all the conveniences for minimizing the discomfort of heat, at times still find the great steel and iron hull uncomfortable, but in the torpedo boat, with not one of these facilities for remedying extremely distressing surroundings that become actual misery, the life of men attached to the wicked, vicious, sneaking horns of the sea can only be described as deplorable.

It is well known that in time of battle there is no more eminent post of danger than on the torpedo boat. Unless ordinarily it can approach within 300 yards of its destined victim its work will not be accompanied with a great prospect of success, and at that distance from a warship, if discovered, it requires only one well aimed shot from a rifled gun to push its shattered bulk down beneath the waves, probably drowning every man. Misery while quiet, almost certain death in the hour of conflict, is the attendant penalty of being a member of its crew. Again, while there is no doubt of their efficiency and of their powerful capability to sink the largest warship afloat, so far torpedo boats have not proved to be of great importance as factors in battle in this war or in preceding strifes between nations. Circumstances perhaps have prevented them from fully exhibiting their prowess, but they are nevertheless only regarded by the commanders of the battleships and cruisers as a possible accident-like, for pedoes. Colonel Samuel Colt first practically applied the use of electricity to the ignition of torpedoes.

But, after all, for nearly 300 years the idea had been treated as an experiment, and until the Confederacy made use of the "water bomb" for harbor defense in 1862 the torpedo was little more than a name. In the succeeding 33 years 30 war vessels have been destroyed by the lurking foe.

All nations have now accepted the torpedo as legitimate in warfare, but the coal mine is tabooed. The coal mine is a package of ten pounds of powder fixed to look like lump of coal and either placed in the bunkers or in the supply of coal which a ship is taking on board.

It is generally unknown perhaps that, while the destruction of the ram Albermarle by Lieutenant William H. Cushing was the only successful accomplishment of the Federals in the use of the torpedo, the Confederates blew up 7 monitors, 11 wooden warships, 6 army transports and several other vessels, in addition to disabling many more. The torpedo boats that were employed in the latter years of the war were so disproportionate in size to their antagonists that they were nicknamed "Davids" and were known as such in both the northern and southern lines.

"The Davids and the monitors" was a well worn war phrase.

But it is strange that in the dozen wars greater and lesser, since our internecine conflict none of the antagonists has taken advantage of the development of the American torpedo and used that subtle instrument to wreak er, a preparatory and experimental school of offensive torpedo study and development, which later resulted in the establishment of the torpedo station at Newport, R. I.

Naval officers have become as fully acquainted with torpedo tactics as they are with seamanship, gunnery and other requirements of their profession. The school for defensive torpedoes is at Willets Point, N. Y. This institution was the idea of and is controlled by the war department.

The following is a list of vessels destroyed by mines and torpedoes in the past 36 years:

According to Trumbull White's history of the China-Japan war, the Japanese sank two Chinese ships, the Teng Yuen and the Lai Yuen (though the latter is said to have capsized), in Mud river, near Fort Puluski, in February, 1862. The Federal gunboat Commodore Jones, 542 tons and six guns, which was blown up in the James river in 1863, furnished possibly the most fearful spectacle of the power of the torpedo. Lieutenant Commander Barnes gave this succinct account of the explosion:

"Suddenly and without any apparent cause she appeared to be lifted bodily, her wheels rapidly revolving in midair. Persons declared they could see the green sedge of the banks beneath her keel. Then through her shot to a great height an immense fountain of foaming water, followed by a denser column thick with mud. She absolutely crumpled to pieces—dissolved, as it were, in midair, enveloped by a fuming spray, mud, water and sand."

In 1867 there was established at the Naval academy, under the supervision of the present Rear Admiral E. O. Mathews, then a lieutenant commander, a preparatory and experimental school of offensive torpedo study and development, which later resulted in the establishment of the torpedo station at Newport, R. I.

Naval officers have become as fully acquainted with torpedo tactics as they are with seamanship, gunnery and other requirements of their profession. The school for defensive torpedoes is at Willets Point, N. Y. This institution was the idea of and is controlled by the war department.

1867, Oct. 10.—Turkish gunboat Suna sunk at the Russian attack on Sultana by sinking an electric contact mine placed by the Russians about three-quarters of a mile above the Turkish defenses; 15 officers and men killed and wounded.

1868, Jan. 25.—Turkish revenue steamer sunk at Batum by Russian torpedo boat armed with the Whitehead fish torpedo.

1868, June.—Chilean torpedo boats Janequeo and Guacolda attacked three large Peruvian guardboats in the bay of Callao by means of a coast line vessel set adrift carrying provisions and a box with 300 pounds of dynamite. This vessel was taken alongside the Loa and exploded while being unloaded. The captain and some 100 men of the Loa perished.

1868, July 3.—Peruvians destroyed the Chilean transport Loa in the bay of Callao by means of a coast line vessel set adrift carrying provisions and a box with 300 pounds of dynamite. This vessel was taken alongside the Loa and exploded while being unloaded. The captain and some 100 men of the Loa perished.

1868, Aug. 23.—French destroyed by spar torpedo at Fuchau, China, the Chinese corvette Yung Woo.

1868, Feb. 15.—French sank the Chinese frigate Yu Yuen by two spar torpedoes, while the frigate was at anchor at Shepu, China.

1869, April 23.—Peixottoists' torpedo gunboat Sampio and three torpedo boats fired four torpedoes, 160 yards range, at Melo's ship Aquidabán, at anchor at night of Santa Catarina, Brazil. The Aquidabán sank. The Sampio was hit 25 times.

According to Trumbull White's history of the China-Japan war, the Japanese sank two Chinese ships, the Teng Yuen and the Lai Yuen (though the latter is said to have capsized), in Mud river, near Fort Puluski, in February, 1862. The Federal gunboat Commodore Jones, 542 tons and six guns, which was blown up in 1863, furnished possibly the most fearful spectacle of the power of the torpedo. Lieutenant Commander Barnes gave this succinct account of the explosion:

"Suddenly and without any apparent cause she appeared to be lifted bodily, her wheels rapidly revolving in midair. Persons declared they could see the green sedge of the banks beneath her keel. Then through her shot to a great height an immense fountain of foaming water, followed by a denser column thick with mud. She absolutely crumpled to pieces—dissolved, as it were, in midair, enveloped by a fuming spray, mud, water and sand."

BERKSHIRE'S LEGISLATORS.

Review of the Term by a Boston Correspondent.

The Springfield Republican has begun its review of the work of the state legislature for this season. The Boston correspondent criticizes the House as a whole as inferior to its rank of former years. Of the local members he writes: In Berkshire, Mr. Anthony has a busy record as monitor. He is not expected to return. Mr. Hall of Williamstown, the leading man in the delegation, by services on large matters, including college taxation, Greylock preservation, and so on, has been well toward the front. Concerning the North Adams delegation, complaint is made of conspicuous absence. It would be more pleasing to write a better record of men who are abundantly able to earn it. Mr. Macken's special effort was for the permission to Catholic temperance societies to carry arms, but the Legislature would not reverse its traditional attitude for years.

Mr. Stevenson of Pittsfield has much more than earned the narrow majority which his constituents gave. They would have honored themselves if they had made it unanimous. Though not one of the foremost debaters, yet his influence has been for that purity, honesty and capacity which count for so much in the House. His services for the children's bureau bill was arduous and was successful, as far as the House was concerned.

The following praise is given Senator Whittlesey: Senator Whittlesey of Berkshire is regarded as one of the valuable members. He has said, out and out, according to report, that he is a corporation man, but that sort of corporation man, who speaks up openly, is not the sneaking sort who is under-corporation pressure of pay. By it he means that the corporative side must be heard. In any event, the Senator is one of the strongest and straightest men around the board and a unanimous renomination would be honorably given to him.

THE GREYLOCK COMMISSIONER

Board of Trade Meeting to Be Called. Three Names Mentioned.

A meeting of the board of trade will probably be called this week. Friday night it is expected, to take some action on the recommendation of a local man for the position of one of the new Greylock commissioners. So far nothing has been done formally, but considerable discussion has been going on.

There are at present three names which have been mentioned. The first one was that of W. H. Chase, who has been one of the firmest advocates of the reservation bill throughout its course. Another is that of George B. Perry, who has been interested in the matter, and did much, especially early in the discussion, to help the movement.

The name of James H. Flagg was prominently mentioned this morning and a number are anxious to have him appointed. He has always taken great interest in affairs relating to the mountain, and would make a valuable man for the commission.

There is still a great deal of work to be done in the matter, most of which will have to be done by the new commissioners, and the selection of the three is therefore an important matter.

New Library Club Formed.

A new Western Massachusetts library club was organized in Springfield Tuesday.

The general features of the program will be 18 speakers, and on account of the length of the literary part of the program the only music will be chorus songs and one or two vocal selections.

The platform at the church has been enlarged to accommodate the class. A large attendance is expected. The list of speakers with their subjects is as follows: Flecia Brown, "Burns and the Scottish Peasantry;" Elizabeth Scovel Cutting, "Massachusetts as a Leader;" Marion Ketchum, "College Training for Women;" Grace McDougall, "The Reign of Nero;" Carrie Sperry, "Hawthorne in North Adams;" Mae Rice, "Our Mountains;" Bert Hollis, "A Boy's Plea for More Room;" Fred Warren, "Kipling and the British Army;" Edward Hourihan, "Our Government and Its Relation to England;" Will Spencer, "Tendencies in American Politics;" Winfield Bennett, "An Anglo-American Alliance;" Percy Spencer, "The Abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine;" Homer Bartlett, class history.

The library in this city was not represented at this first meeting, but Miss Dunton, the librarian, and Miss Jackson, chairman of the trustees, will undoubtedly become members in the near future.

The club will be a valuable one to librarians, and such subjects as the sending of books to the country towns and the relation of libraries to towns will be discussed.

The following officers were elected:

President, C. A. Cutler of Forbes library, Northampton; first vice-president, J. C. Daus of Springfield; second vice-president, H. B. Ballard of the Berkshire Atheneum of Pittsfield; secretary, Miss Alice Shepard of this city; treasurer, Miss Mary Robinson of the free library at Amherst.

The Reduced Wages at Barber's.

On Monday a reduction of 10 cents on a case went into effect in the dress suit case department at F. J. Barber's leather works on State street. The employees in that department, about a dozen in all refused to accept the reduction and went out. After thinking the matter over they returned, Mr. Barber says, to work Tuesday noon at the reduced wages.

Two men employed in another part of the shop felt aggrieved and began to make trouble by calling the people who had returned to work "scabs," etc. These men were discharged this morning and Mr. Barber has sent for others to take their places. He claims he is paying as good wages as any like concern in the country and that the reduction was necessitated by the stringency of the times.

Mr. Barber's action has been supported by the Bostonians.

The Bostonians Go Down a Second Time Before the Chicagoans.

Chicago, June 22.—Klobodanz was unable to puzzle the Chicagoans with his curves yesterday, and another defeat was chalked up against the beamers. He was clearly outpitted by Thornton, and largely contributed to the downfall of the champion by giving eight bases on balls, four of which resulted in tallies.

Although the Bostonians batted harder than the local team, the large number of passes, combined with four damaging errors, was too great a handicap to overcome. Long's hand bothered him considerably, and he made three errors out of nine offered chances. Both teams hit the ball hard. The champions touched up Thornton for 13 hits for a total of 11 bases, while the orphans found "Kloby" for 11 safe singles.

The eastern pitcher led in the batting with a home run, which netted three runs, and a single. Chicago clinched the victory by opportune hitting in the second and fifth innings. Score:

A VERY ANCIENT TURTLE.

T. E. Ives Receives a Carved Living Relic of His Boyhood.

T. E. Ives received a curious and very interesting express package Tuesday night from Cheshire, Conn., the home of his boyhood. It was a land turtle having on the bottom of the shell the initials of Mr. Ives, his father and his brother. The letters are B. I., F. I., and H. I., and the date is 1860. The carving was done by T. E. Ives when he was nine years old, and to have the turtle come to light now was a great surprise to him.

It was found by Romeo Dickerman on the old Ives homestead. Mr. Dickerman was a schoolmate of Mr. Ives and is now a well-to-do farmer in his native town. The turtle was forwarded to Mr. Ives by his cousin, Clifford Bradley of Cheshire, Conn. Mr. Ives will exhibit the turtle in the window of his State street restaurant for a few days and will then send it to his brother in New Haven. It will ultimately be sent to a sister who still lives in Cheshire and will be turned loose again on the old farm, where it has lived for at least 35 years and nobody knows how much longer.

The turtle is in a healthy condition, although at some time, and evidently a good while ago, quite a hole was stove in one side of its shell. It is a common land turtle, with black shell mottled with yellow, and is about six inches long.

Quinn-Murphy Wedding.

There was a pleasant wedding and reception Tuesday evening when Miss Sarah A. Quinn and Joseph V. Murphy were married by Rev. George Flynn. Both are well known and popular young people, and the reception which followed the ceremony was a most enjoyable affair. The ceremony was performed at St. Francis parsonage at 7:15 o'clock, Miss Mary A. Rowan, cousin of the bride, being bridesmaid, and Thomas H. Quinn, the bride's brother, best man.

Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception at the bride's home, 52 Marshall street, at which about 125 people were present. There was music and dancing, and the party did not break up till early this morning. Hosford furnished refreshments. A number were present from out of the city. Among them were Miss B. E. Luddy of Hoosick Falls, William Dunn of Charles City, Iowa, Mrs. J. M. Burke, Miss Ella Burke, Miss Minnie Hughes and Miss Ella Hughes of Adams and several from Pittsfield.

Many beautiful presents were given to the bride and groom by their friends. The groom is a back tender in the printing room of the Arnold works, and the bride has been employed at the hospital and at the sanatorium. The couple will make their home on High street.

The recommendations of the president in his annual report concerning scholarship aid were adopted. Thirty scholarships of $90 will be granted to the freshman class. The amount of aid granted during the three later years of the course is to be fixed by rank, those who have a grade of C receiving $90 a year and those who have attained a higher rank receiving proportionately more. By this arrangement, aid will not be given hereafter to students in the three upper classes who do not attain at least the mark of 70 per cent.

In order that
